SLC's Dance Factory in Downtown Hollywood Has All the Right Moves

HOLLYWOOD, FL - April 23, 2008 - From restless housewives to cardio-workout buffs to club-scene regulars, SLC's Dance Factory in Downtown Hollywood offers something for just about everyone.

Dance Factory owner and operator Susana Morales brings an exciting element to the Downtown arts and entertainment scene with a variety of hip classes that include club-ready Latin dance, hip-hop, extreme cardio and pole dancing, a hot new trend recently featured on Oprah.

Before you hit the clubs in Downtown Hollywood, take the Latin Crashcourse which teaches the basics and club-ready choreography for merengue, bachata and salsa. The Group Salsa - Rueda Casino Class aims to get all of South Florida dancing in circles.

Ladies are invited to get their groove on at the monthly Housewife Recharge, featuring new dance moves and recipes and raw vegan refreshments.

Movement guru Susana Morales AKA Susie La Cubana is dedicated to bringing out her students, inner dancer. "I'm going to teach you the foundation so that the next time you hear music, you can dance," she said.

Beginning in May, kids ages 6 to 13 can "learn the moves, learn the culture, learn the dance" in the Youth Dance Explosion program. Authentic and original Quince choreographies also are offered in the comfort of the studio.

Upcoming special events include "Breakin' tha Bank" on May 31, a competition that offers up to $2,000 in cash prizes.
